What Is the Green Face Mask Used For?

Schools and colleges use a mask like this during practical classes where powders, dried plant material or chalk dust are handled, and health rooms keep it for visitors and staff. Because it matches the blue non-woven mask in construction and pack size, a buyer can run two colours side by side: green for one lab block, class group or visiting team, blue for another, making it easy to see who has been issued which stock.

Hand the masks out from the box without touching the inner face, show students how to press the upper edge over the nose and pull the lower edge down to cover the chin, and collect used masks in a lined bin at the end of the session. A spare box in each lab avoids students sharing or reusing masks between periods.
