What Are Finger Puppets Used For?

During circle time, a teacher can slip one animal onto each finger and tell a short story, pausing so the children can name the animal or guess what it will say next. Children then take turns wearing the puppets to retell the story in their own words. Speaking through a character helps shy children join in, and it builds vocabulary, sentence formation and the confidence to talk in front of a group.

Pretend play with puppets also involves sharing, waiting for a turn and responding to someone else's character, so the set supports social development as well as language. Small groups can act out a scene, invent a conversation between two animals, or role-play everyday routines and feelings. A practical tip: keep all five puppets together in a labelled pouch or box so the set stays complete between sessions.
