What Is the Slide Box Used For?

A compact white-wood box suits small sets that are used often: the slides for one practical, the mounts a student is working on, or reference slides kept next to a microscope. At 6 7/8 inches long it is easy to hold in one hand, slip into a drawer or hand out to a group at the bench.

Because the shoulder cover lifts off to reveal the slide ends, students can grip a slide at its end and lift it out cleanly, which keeps fingerprints off the specimen area. Mark the end of each box with the set name or topic so boxes can be identified quickly on a shelf.
