What Is the Acid Filter Used For?

A mobile fume hood that works by filtration depends on its filter to trap fumes before air is released back into the room. The acid filter is the part that deals with acid vapours, so it mattersin chemistry practicals and preparation rooms where acids are poured, diluted or warmed inside the hood. Fitting a fresh filter restores the hood's ability to take on acid work.

Plan filter changes around how often the hood runs and which acids are handled, and follow the hood's own indicator or maintenance schedule where it has one. Wear gloves and eye protection when taking out a used filter, bag it for disposal under your laboratory's chemical-waste procedure, and keep a spare on the shelf so practical classes are not interrupted.

What to Specify When Ordering

- The make and model (or a photograph) of your inverted mobile fume hood, so the filter fit can be confirmed.
- How many replacement filters you need per hood.
