What Are Narrow Mouthed Bottles Used For?

A narrow neck is the right shape for liquids: it pours in a controlled stream, limits splashing and slows evaporation between uses. In practice the small 30 mL and 60 mL sizes suit student reagent sets and sample collection, the 125–500 mL sizes serve as bench bottles for acids, bases and indicator solutions, and the 1,000 mL and 2,000 mL sizes hold the stock from which smaller bottles are refilled.

Because the caps are liner-less, there is no separate liner to trap residue, fall out or react with the contents, which also makes washing simpler. Fill the bottles through a funnel, label every bottle with its contents and date, and keep light-sensitive reagents in amber glass instead.

What to Specify When Ordering

- The capacities you need from 30, 60, 125, 250, 500, 1,000 and 2,000 mL.
- The quantity of each size, for example one set per student bench.
- Whether any reagents are light-sensitive and need an amber glass alternative.
- Your delivery location in India or abroad.

Supplier
