What Are Microscope Glass Slides Used For?

Blank glass slides are the everyday base for any specimen a student prepares: an onion peel in iodine, a cheek-cell smear, a drop of pond water or a leaf epidermis for counting stomata. Place the specimen in the centre, add a drop of water or stain, and lower a cover slip at an angle to avoid trapping air bubbles. The flat, clear glass keeps the image even across the field of view.

Ground edges make the slides safer to handle and less likely to chip when students slide them across the microscope stage. Because they arrive pre-cleaned, they can go straight into a practical without a washing step; store unused slides in their pack to keep dust off. Labs that run frequent wet-mount practicals often keep several packs of 50 in stock.

What to Specify When Ordering

- Number of packs of 50 slides needed for the term or year.
- Whether you also need cover slips, cavity slides or slide forceps on the same order.
- Any special requirement such as a writing area, so we can advise before quoting.
