Description :

Towel (Product Code: SCL-557/028) is a plain white cotton towel for the hand-washing point of a school or college chemistry laboratory, where students dry their hands after washing off reagents and before they handle notebooks, food or door handles. Cotton soaks up water well, and white fabric shows at a glance when a towel is soiled and due for the laundry. The towel is supplied by Jain Scientific Equipments Pvt Ltd (ScienceLab), Ambala, India, a chemistry consumables supplier to schools and colleges.

Typical Use

A lab towel belongs on a hook beside the sink or hand-wash station. The routine at the end of every practical is simple: remove gloves, wash hands thoroughly with soap and water, then dry them completely, because damp hands pick up powders more easily and make glassware slippery to hold. It is good practice to keep hand towels separate from the cloths used for wiping benches or drying apparatus, so that residues from the work surface never reach clean skin.

When planning a school lab setup, provide enough towels for every sink so that one set can be laundered while another is in use. Because the towels are machine washable, they can go through the wash on the same cycle as lab coats. Never use a hand towel to mop up an acid, alkali or solvent spill; follow the lab's spill procedure and use the absorbent material intended for it, then launder or discard anything that has touched the spill.

Supplier

Jain Scientific Equipments Private Limited operates as ScienceLab from Ambala, Haryana. The company supplies everyday lab consumables such as towels to schools, colleges and dealers in India and international markets, so hand-wash stations can be stocked along with the rest of a chemistry order. More about the company is on the ScienceLab profile page.
