What Is the Number Mat Used For?

The Number Mat turns a number line into a playing space. A child stands on a number and hops forwards to add or backwards to subtract, so 7 + 3 becomes three hops on from 7. Asking which number comes just before or just after the one a child is standing on builds number sense without worksheets.

Skip-counting games, such as hopping only on every second number, prepare children for multiplication tables. Teachers can run team relay games, or ask the class to predict where a classmate will land before the hops begin, making the mat a lively part of a junior maths corner.
